☛ Bird Market. With about 70 bird stalls showcasing a variety of melodious songbirds, this garden, with its courtyards & moon gates, is a delight. Songbirds remain a favourite pet of some local men & the garden is testimony to the excessive pampering they receive.

☛ Jade Market. A short walk south from the temple is the Jade Market (located on the junction of Kansu & Battery streets), where hawkers sell various shades & qualities of the stone. To Chinese, jade has great spiritual value for warding off evil. When carved into certain shapes, it can represent wealth (deer), good fortune (tiger) & power (dragon). Don't buy expensive jade unless you are with an expert.

☛ Wong Tai Sin Temple. At the impressive Wong Tai Sin Temple, all three main religions of China – Buddhism, Taoism & Confucianism – are practiced. The temple is dedicated to Wong Tai Sin, a shepherd who earned immortality through his good deeds. The temple is a shining example of traditional Chinese architecture, with red pillars, a golden ceiling & ornate latticework. The “office” consists of many “soothsayers” & the temple may well house the largest concentration of fortune-tellers in Asia.
